THE REPUBLIC OF CORTESIA DEL MAR
COMMON COURT
In the matter between:
STAR_LITTY
&
THE NATIONAL FORUM
(with various parties intervening)

CASE DETAILS:
CASE NUMBER: 2
COURT: IceCarim ACJ
DATE: 14 October 2024 (GMT)

CASE TEXT:

star_litty:
OH MY GOD I CAN TALK HERE
GIVE ME THE RIGHT TO VOTE
I DESERVE RIGHTS

IceCarim:
Are you asking the Court to rule on this?

star_litty:
oh my god another bot??
that's so cool that the CDM discord has human like robots

star_litty:
yes
I deserve rights!!!
give us suffrage !!!
love,
miss star_litty
seraph of radiance and princess of kovfefe

IceCarim:
Is there any constitutional basis for allowing permanent residents the right to vote? (For example, does it violate the right to equality? Dignity? Differentiates without a rational basis?)

And why is it not a compelling reason to say that allowing only citizens to vote promotes the security of the electoral process by ensuring only persons closely connected with Cortesia can determine who holds office?
(By closely connected is meant highly dependent on the nation for living conditions like property or primarily living in the nation)

star_litty:
I think voting is hot the constitution says equal rights probably and I don't feel very equal rn why is your reason not compelling? because I said so and for the record, I'm very close with Cortesia just ask yodabird19
I am loyal to Cortesia, I'm a patriot
GRANT ME CITIZENSHIP AND GIVE ME RIGHTS 💗💗💗
I am more than qualified and so are my friends !!! just hear me out please 😸😸 ~~bro not elomilo~~

EloMilo:
Residents were always alloud to vote i thought

star_litty:
not anymore
I don't have rights apparently

EloMilo:
Damn
Not, uh, fuckin

Who r u lol

star_litty:
...

EloMilo:
Oh star

star_litty:
it's star
surprise shawty

EloMilo:
🙏
Ight gamers I'm going to sleep

star_litty:
I've infiltrated the cortesian government

EloMilo:
Give hb her voting rights back
Or yall or sexist and misogyny and also smell

star_litty:
YEAH 👍
what he said

IceCarim:
Thanks @You are benefitting this nation I'll issue judgment later today

star_litty:
omg my voice has been heard !!!
:ball_happy:
:pink_wings3: :radiantrevolution: :allmyloveforyou:

Astrobolt:
Residents can't vote AND the citizens are forced to suffer?? Smh my head

IceCarim:
Do you wish to add anything to the arguments before the Court?
You can join the case as a party if you wish

Vortexion:
Objection your honor @Electoral College
I believe Residents should not be given the right to vote in any capacity for matters regarding the cortesian government or its people

IceCarim:
Thank you, would you like to join the matter?
And if so, we would appreciate it if you could elaborate on your position

Vortexion:
No, thank you, your honor
Yes, your honor: I believe that only registered, 1:1, legitimate citizens of the state should be allowed to vote for national matters, as they are the only demographic which such matters concern, as opposed to residents, who such matters rarely or never concern

Astrobolt:
I have no idea what is happening

EloMilo:
Scar wants to vote on things. Like bills and elections etc.

Astrobolt:
I support scar

EloMilo:
I don't know why you guys are even talking abt this

The dual nationality act litterally states they have the same rights as a citizen

(2) A Cortesian dual national who is not a member of the in-game Cortesian nation is entitled to the same privileges

[redacted]

and obligations, mutatis mutandis, as any Cortesian national.

Equivalence of Cortesian dual nationals of both types

(1) Cortesian dual nationals who are members of the in-game Cortesian nation and Cortesian dual nationals who are not members of the in-game Cortesian nation are to be treated equally under the law, mutatis mutandis.

(2) No law may legally distinguish the two aforementioned types of Cortesian dual nationals, except for the purpose of clarification, designating qualifications for the holding of sensitive public powers, or supporting their unique needs with respect to Cortesian law.

Treated equally under law

CommradePotatoe:
Constitution is always supreme over any act
If the constitution says a and an act says b, a is correct

EloMilo:

5. Nationality
   (1) Cortesian nationality is held by permanent residents and citizens.
   (2) Only citizens are accorded civil suffrage, the nature and extent of which is set out in Section 11; in every other respect, permanent residents and citizens have the same rights, benefits, and duties from holding Cortesian nationality.

It says that only citizens have suffrage

CommradePotatoe:
Then that's the case

EloMilo:
Fix your act

Equivalence of Cortesian dual nationals of both types

(1) Cortesian dual nationals who are members of the in-game Cortesian nation and Cortesian dual nationals who are not members of the in-game Cortesian nation are to be treated equally under the law, mutatis mutandis.
(2) No law may legally distinguish the two aforementioned types of Cortesian dual nationals, except for the purpose of clarification, designating qualifications for the holding of sensitive public powers, or supporting their unique needs with respect to Cortesian law.

CommradePotatoe:
That isn't referring to citizens and prs
It's referring to nationals who are in cortesia in game vs cortesians who are in another nation in game

EloMilo:
Ik, one for Cartesian as their ingame nation and Dif nation as ingame nation

CommradePotatoe:
Like if I were a part of the radiance group on HE

EloMilo:
I know lol

CommradePotatoe:
ah

EloMilo:
What does the "public powers imply"

CommradePotatoe:
@Chief Justice your honor may I file a quick amicus brief in this constitutional question? I have one question tho
Can amicus briefs be filed for both sides, or just the one petitioning the court, I'm not sure of the terminology
Likely cabinet related matters
Err
No cabinet stuff likely
We didn't want someone say be security minister and then not be in the ingame group @EloMilo if you want me to clarify the act dm me later and we can discuss some alternative language, then I can propose it in the forum
And btw Elo you should run to join the forum yourself!!
You can do so anytime

EloMilo:
Frick, I'm busy that day, maybe next year though
I was just about to lol

CommradePotatoe:
:bruh~1:

EloMilo:
Yall are discriminating against the residents.
In the same section it says everyone has equal benefits and opportunities.

> Rights for equality
>
> (1) Everyone is equal before and under the law, which entails—
>
> (a) the right to equal benefits, protections, and opportunities from the law; and
>
> (b) equal responsibilities from the law in equal circumstances.
>
> (2) Everyone has the right not to be discriminated against, directly or indirectly, on the basis of race, colour, ethnic or social origin, nationality, sex, gender, sexual orientation, physical or mental health, disability, age, marital status, religion, belief, conscience, language, culture, or wealth, or on any other analogous basis.
>
> (3) Differential treatment on any of the bases specified in Subsection (2), or on any recognised analogous basis, is presumed to be discrimination. This presumption may be refuted only if such treatment is demonstrated to constitute a reasonable and justifiable limitation on Subsection (2) in terms of Section 27.

"Everyone has the right not to be discriminated against directly or indirectly on the bases of [...] nationality"

Vortexion:
Cope 🔥🔥🔥

EloMilo:
And if everyone is equal under the law, there is no discrimination between residents and citizens. then the term "citizens" in section 11, is a misnomer.
And infact represents all cortesians.
Meaning that residents should be voting as well.

Rights for democracy

(1) Every citizen has the right—

(a) to vote in free and fair—

(i) elections for any elected public office; and

(ii) national referendums;

(b) to stand in an election for any elected public office; and

(c) to hold office if elected.

AvaniSpades:
this is a dumb take
I dont know if you are intentionally just pretending that PR and Citizen are the same thing but they aren't Nationals mean all members of CDM, and there's two tiers. (Permanent) Residents and Citizens
You keep pointing to parts of the constitution that specifically mention citizens and saying OMG!!!! the NON CITIZEN doesn't have the CITIZEN rights!!!!! like...yeah.. she's not a citizen..
Residents do not, and should not have the right to vote

EloMilo:
Yall are discrimnating against nationality (the cortesian nationality)

AvaniSpades:
An argument for PR's being able to vote, is an argument for non citizens being able to apply for residency, not be active and contributing members of CDM in any capacity, and be able to sway an election

EloMilo:
Also yes I mentioned that already lol
Yall gotta repeal the contradicting sections of the dual nationality act at the bear minimum

(2) A Cortesian dual national who is not a member of the in-game Cortesian nation is entitled to the same privileges

[redacted]

and obligations, mutatis mutandis, as any Cortesian national.

Like this part

AvaniSpades:
Star is a dual national but not a dual citizen. She is entitled to the same rights as a CDM national is, her right being that of a Resident
I see nothing wrong with the wording, and im actually happy it specify's nationals because thats really smart

CommradePotatoe:
See "mutatis muntandis"
I believe that accounts for any issues regarding someone's nationality status
Also hi Robyn

AvaniSpades:
Compot can you help me out? Am I reading all this wrong or can you actually see any argument in favor of what Elo is saying ?
Hi I woke up and choose discord

CommradePotatoe:
Uh I'll try but I'm with my dad

EloMilo:
Compot specified here

AvaniSpades:
don't bother buddy
enjoy family time

EloMilo:
^^^^

CommradePotatoe:
Bu bu my father is a cortesian patriot

AvaniSpades:
I wish..

CommradePotatoe:
I should set him up with discord
Wtf
You're done

EloMilo:
I just be chilling at work rn, passing time because I requested pto for this afternnon
Not scheduled for anything

CommradePotatoe:
Residents should know that they have the right to be informed as to their path to citizenship
The interior minister has to inform them as per the const

AvaniSpades:
@Electoral College I would love to join in this judgement.

Even thought I think it’s just like, a continuous and painful misreading of the constitution to benefit someone’s argument

EloMilo:
Oh it definitely is
My eye kinda hurts and I slept for 2 hours today. So I be trippin.
2 hours because mfs don't shut tf up in sleep calls

AvaniSpades:
the curse of being chronically online
my condolences

EloMilo:
🙏
I'm genuinely indifferent to whether or not star/scar can vote lmao

Yodabird19:
hi I wrote this act 👋 this isn't contradictory with the constitution's stipulation that citizens have suffrage and residents do not
"national" is an umbrella term referring to both residents and citizens the quoted section of the act only specifies that cortesian nationals who also hold nationality elsewhere have the same rights as cortesian nationals who do not so, a dual national who is a citizen has the same rights as a non dual national who is a citizen, and a dual national who is a resident has the same rights as a non dual national who is a resident — IE, not including suffrage in the latter case

EloMilo:
That is so real of u

Yodabird19:
on the matter of whether dual nationals ought to be residents or citizens, the dual nationality act has nothing to say however, star is first and foremost a member of radiance; the constitutional guideline that citizens should be people who are trusted to reliably exercise their political rights in CDM is largely responsible for the norm (violated thus far only once in recent memory) that non-primary dual nationals remain residents rather than gaining citizenship also @Electoral College feel free to cite allat ^^ as an amicus brief if you'd like lol

s1ice:
do y'all think it would be viable for permanent residents to be granted the ability to vote on matters that directly affect them?
i'm mainly referring to this ^ statement about how many national matters do not affect residents

IceCarim:
How would the Court determine matters that relate to PRs and those that do not
And if it would be viable, should the Court lay down the rule or should it be left to the National Forum?
Thank you

s1ice:
presumably, upon the proposal of a bill or act, either by the Court, a committee, or the national forum (as i do not believe the process of determining should be conducted by only one individual), it would be analyzed and determined that it would relate to PRs if the bill or act is deemed to modify or affect the rights, privileges, or responsibilities of all permanent residents and considering that this is only a rough idea, the specifics can be determined at a later date, such as specific criteria relating to PRs, if others are on board with the

Yodabird19:
I think this would need to be a legislative act, possibly an amendment

I fail to see how the court could adjudicate such a practice into legal canon, when the existing legislation is so clear about residents not having voting rights

IceCarim:
if the court finds that legislation inconsistent with the constitution, then it might be open to the court to fashion an appropriate remedy yes they can be filed for both sides there is another important question raised At the moment, I'm of the view that the nominal respondent in this case is the National Forum it's an Act of the National Forum that (at least in part) gives rise to the present challenge
I welcome any submissions on whether some other party or no party at all should be the respondent in this case

IceCarim:
Thank you I found your submissions very helpful
@EloMilo thank you too, you raised some interesting points

CommradePotatoe:
This is regarding the dual national act right your honor?
I'd argue Yodabird should be the respondent since he authored the act, but if mr bird doesn't want that I could since I helped out a bit

IceCarim:
I have difficulties with this because he authored the Act as a holder of office (Member of the Forum) and the Act passed with the approval of the National Forum it has legal authority not because of who wrote it, but because the National Forum is a special institution given the constitutional power to create legislation

CommradePotatoe:
Right

But in CommradePotatoe v Vortexion I and II, vortexion, the main author of the act, served as the respondent
Would the author of an act not be the best advocate for their act?
Maybe I'm confused
What's the main challenge at this time?

IceCarim:
What was different in CommradePotatoe I was that the issue was a Bill
CommradePotatoe II should have cited the National Forum as the respondent

IceCarim:
I think there are several legal challenges, all directed at guaranteeing permanent residents the right to vote
So there is a constitutional interpretation question
And then there's the question about the dual nationality act
That's true, but they don't act in a personal interest

CommradePotatoe:
So how would the nf act as the respondent

IceCarim:
the NF can decide that itself but whenever legislation is being challenged, I think it would be the responsibility of the NF to defend it if the NF does not defend it, of course that reduces the likelihood of the Act surviving constitutional scrutiny

CommradePotatoe:
So the nf would elect who to represent themselves

IceCarim:
it can do that or it can say whoever wants to defend it can go make arguments in court it has lots of freedom to determine that it can decide on a case by case basis how to defend matters

CommradePotatoe:
Thank you your honor

IceCarim:
or it can set a general rule (like we elect representatives each time or any MF can defend the case)

IceCarim:
@Cheated In Rotten Flesh the Court has taken judicial notice of your helpful comment in the National Forum, thank you

Brick_WallGaming:
No problem, glad I can be of help

CommradePotatoe:
well Id like to submit 2 quick amicus briefs:

With regards to the general challenge regarding residential voting rights, permanent residents have always been imagined as nationals without civil sufferage. My personal belief is that the residential body serves as a reservoir of Cortesians who may go inactive, or may not primarily play in Cortesia. It allows people to remain Cortesian without being entirely kicked out for not being present in the Republic. Granting sufferage to residents would suddenly empower a large body of inactive and absent players to influence our elections and processes without habitually exercising their rights.

With regards to the challenge around the DN act. The DN's intention, in my view, has always been to account for players in other countries, not between Residents and Citizens. Striking this act would hurt Cortesia, as it would make the legal status of players abroad vauge and muddy.

IceCarim:

@You are benefitting this nation and @President @Vice President, the Court requests your submissions on whether the Supreme Court should grant direct access to hear this case, or whether it should be heard in the Common Court
Direct access should only be granted if an expeditious decision is required, because it will deprive the parties of an appeal
Also, the Supreme Court is not currently quorate (it does not have enough members to adjudicate matters), so direct access can only be granted if there is an exceedingly persuasive reason to decide this case without the possibility of an appeal
In fact it would have to be necessary to decide this case on direct access for the Supreme Court to hear the matter directly

CommradePotatoe:
Your honor, is this in regards to the challenge to the DN act, the question regarding residential sufferage, or both?

IceCarim:
let's say we consider them separately because this Court will grant direct access if either challenge must of necessity be heard in the Supreme Court

ItsAlreadyGold:
So the dn act isnt like a deez nuts joke right
I've been reading along and I would be very disappointed if that was just a deez nuts joke I just read

IceCarim:
it's the dual nationality act

ItsAlreadyGold:
Oh! Ok, continue on 🤭

CommradePotatoe:

I think both cases do not need direct access. In my opinion neither of these issues are pressing. We have been operating under the DN act for a while now, and the system of Residents v Citizens has been in place before the Constitution without complaint.

Yodabird19:
dreadnought act
I concur with the vice president

IceCarim:
thank you for your submission

star_litty:
this sucks
lol

Vortexion:
Sorry, lads
No election poisoning for you
:redone:

IceCarim:
well here's a question for MFs with this view
Is it necessary for permanent residents to be considered more likely to have bad faith in relation to voting?
Why does that not go too far?

IceCarim:
I have considered the view that "[g]ranting sufferage to residents would suddenly empower a large body of inactive and absent players to influence our elections" too and my question is, why is the solution to that not inactivity itself? Inactives are unlikely to participate, no?

star_litty:

here’s a new idea
I was just talking to the president girl we just want to be included

IceCarim:
the president is the biggest p(ermanent)resident

star_litty:
right so my new idea and a somewhat middle ground. Give residents the opportunity to apply for citizenship. Make a channel for it, it can have questions and tests our loyalty just like applying for US citizenship does. Doesn’t need to be easy but it should be accessible, you can individually grant it.
I’ve been to the presidents house

Yodabird19:
if I may,
I think that the issue stems from the gap between the level of engagement with CDM needed to vote in an election (or, worse, be told to vote by somebody more active & to do so without question), and the level of engagement with CDM needed to actually have a stake in said election many residents are likely too inactive to bother voting at all, yes, but I also believe many residents, if invited to do so, may cast votes in the election - out of novelty, boredom, or because they were told to - despite not having a significant investment in its outcome in fact, if we assume for the moment (see residents) that the executive's execution of the current system of nationality has been entirely up to constitutional standards, then by definition all individuals who do have a sufficient investment in CDM to warrant a hand in its electoral process are already citizens in that regard, one can only be a resident if one does not have sufficient investment, meaning that any vote cast by a resident necessarily falls into the category described here supreme-court and thus, if there was no possibility of votes falling into that category, then this discussion would be moot automatically.

I think this idea warrants further discussion, though maybe in residents rather than here :thumbsup~1:

star_litty:
so many words
I just want to vote 😭😭

CommradePotatoe:
I concur with the President's submission, seen here (supreme-court). I'd also like to add something I didn't add in my amicus brief, and that is the possibility of foreign influence in Cortesia. Admittedly, this concern isn't nearly as profound as it was on a server like CivMC, but I think it should still be addressed. We have always possessed a body of residents active in Cortesia that primarily play in other nations. Players from the SEC, and now, players from the Illios alliance. Consider former residents such as Comradenick, a foreign leader who I granted residency to at the time because I considered him a friend. Comradenick later obbybombed our iceroads and subsequently lost his nationality. If residents had suffrage at that time, he would have been able to influence our government in the interests of Mount Augusta and NOT Cortesia. This submission is not made with the intent to accuse any resident of wanting to do harm to Cortesia, if I had concerns that any current player was a threat, I would be pursuing them. I simply want to point out that there has always remained an ever so slight risk of bad faith from those who play primarily in other nations. The lack of residential suffrage safe guards against those extremely rare bad faith actors from threatening Cortesia's democratic institutions, while still giving them all other rights and due processes entitled to nationals of this republic.

star_litty:
so you don’t trust us
and you’re going to be the next president?

CommradePotatoe:

"if I had concerns that any current player was a threat, I would be pursuing them"

star_litty:
but you still feel the need to safeguard yourself against your own residents what rights do we even have a residents?

CommradePotatoe:
yes, because the scrutiny applied to residential applicants is lower than what is applied to those who become citizens

CommradePotatoe:
see Article II

CHARTER OF RIGHTS 15
7. Application of rights 15
8. Interpretations concerning rights 15
9. Rights for equality 16
10. Rights for human dignity 16
11. Rights for democracy 16
12. Rights for basic needs 17
13. Right to housing 17
14. Rights for safety and security 18
15. Rights for property 18
16. Rights for liberty 18
17. Rights for access to information 19
18. Prohibition of censorship 20
19. Rights for privacy 20
20. Right to a secular State 20
21. Rights for the rule of law 20
22. Rights for administrative justice 21
23. Rights for access to courts 21
24. Rights for persons arrested, detained, or charged 21
25. Rights for fair trial 22
26. Rights for fair sentencing 23
27. Limitation of rights 24

star_litty:
I honestly don’t feel respected as an ally or resident anymore wild

CommradePotatoe:
I do not wish these proceedings to have that effect

star_litty:
not you bringing up someone who bombed your ice road as a reason to not trust your residents

CommradePotatoe:
if that wasnt the case you wouldn't be a resident

star_litty:
me and astro have shown no malice only support as all of the radiants here have but if you don’t trust us god damn what have I been doing wrong?

CommradePotatoe:
"The lack of residential suffrage safe guards against those extremely rare bad faith actors from threatening Cortesia's democratic institutions, while still giving them all other rights and due processes entitled to nationals of this republic."
"extremely rare bad faith actors"

star_litty:
so one bad apple
ruins the bunch got it

Yodabird19:
compot made quite a point of the fact he doesn't actually believe there to be anyone that concern applies to right now?
he's just talking in general about the way the system is constructed & its resiliency to a different scenario

star_litty:
I’m saying the system is too strict

Yodabird19:
you can't design your systems so they rely on everybody acting in good faith 100% of the time

star_litty:
well you should be able to trust the radiants

Yodabird19:
yeah, and we do, that's never been in question

star_litty:
we’re your sister

CommradePotatoe:
but radiants aren't the only people that are residents

star_litty:
Right but I have a solution application process it doesn’t have to be easy but give us the chance

Astrobolt:
Last time I heard a joke like this I fell off my pet dinosaur 🤣😂

star_litty:
you can pick and chose say it again louder baby girl

Astrobolt:

LAST TIME I HEARD A JOKE LIKE THIS I FELL OFF MY PET DINOSAUR

Yodabird19:
something I often say (usually in more serious contexts than this tbh - the moral stakes here are not that high) is that "it's possible to trust everybody individually, but not trust everybody as a group"
you can simultaneously have full faith in everybody involved in a system, and also not put your faith in the blind belief you can never possibly be betrayed by anybody

CommradePotatoe:

(5) Every permanent resident has the right to be informed in sufficient detail of their progress towards acquiring citizenship upon request. The Minister of the Interior must take appropriate measures to ensure that this right is fulfilled.

star_litty:
you don't make it very well known like resident application

Astrobolt:
I request to be informed immediately of my progress of becoming a citizen

star_litty:
the system doesn't run smoothly

star_litty:
me as well

CommradePotatoe:
seeing as this conversation is starting to run away from the scope of this case and into more interpersonal politics

star_litty:

sighs

CommradePotatoe:
I think we may want to shift it to residents

Astrobolt:
I think it would be wonderful idea if you read my most recent message in residents

Yodabird19:
I think it should be pointed out that citizenship is not a guaranteed thing all residents progress towards residency versus citizenship is about evaluating what level of involvement/stake a national has in the cortesian political system, which may or may not change with time (and to be clear, I'm not casting judgement here ^ on whether any actual people in particular are deserving of residency versus citizenship - just talking about the philosophy of the system)

Astrobolt:
Please don't interfere with my constitutional right to know this information 😭

star_litty:
yeah you tell him
not saying anyone deserves it just wish we had the right to apply or vote obviously no one is entitled to anything

IceCarim:
The Court thanks all the parties for their submissions, which have been largely civil and constructive. I assure you all that I will consider every single issue raised and address it in the judgment
I think it would be helpful to bring the attention of section 5 of the Constitution to all the parties:

(4) National legislation must be enacted in accordance with this Section to provide for the acquisition, loss, and restoration of both permanent residency and citizenship.

(5) National legislation contemplated in terms of Subsection (4) must—

(a) accord due regard to the distinction between permanent residency and citizenship set out in Subsection (2) in providing for their respective acquisition, loss, and restoration; and

(b) reflect the following principles:

(i) Transparency, responsiveness, and accountability in the administration of rights or interests in Cortesian nationality.

(ii) The need for uniform standards and procedures to regulate the administration of rights or interests in Cortesian nationality.

(iii) The need for access to judicial review of administrative decisions adversely affecting rights or interests in Cortesian nationality, in order to ensure the procedural fairness of such decisions.

If any parties wish to make submissions in the light of these provisions, that would be welcomed @President @Vice President, an important question: does the Dual Nationality Act prevent non-member dual nationals from acquiring citizenship?
Does being a non-member prevent a person from "habitually or primarily exercising civil and political rights in the Republic"?

Yodabird19:
I believe that, within the scope of the dual nationality act, this question is answered straightforwardly by section 4

4. Equivalence of Cortesian dual nationals of both types

(1) Cortesian dual nationals who are members of the in-game Cortesian nation and Cortesian dual nationals who are not members of the in-game Cortesian nation are to be treated equally under the law, mutatis mutandis.

(2) No law may legally distinguish the two aforementioned types of Cortesian dual nationals, except for the purpose of clarification, designating qualifications for the holding of sensitive public powers, or supporting their unique needs with respect to Cortesian law.

non-member dual nationals and member dual nationals are entitled to equal treatment under the law; there is no reason why their being accorded either residency or citizenship in keeping with their merits would not be included under this provision while s4/2 does permit that law may be established which discriminates on such a basis for the purpose of "designating qualifications for the holding of sensitive public powers", whether citizenship counts as a "sensitive public power" is a question of interpretation not yet settled, and the act itself makes no such judgement, and no subsequent law has been passed for this purpose

IceCarim:
Thank you, that's very helpful Mr President

star_litty:
@Astro: Wall of Text edition
I've been thinking

Astrobolt:
A most friendly reminder that I exercised my civil and political rights via the petitions channel
Far more than any mere citizen hath done

s1ice:
the hell happened in here

star_litty:
oh uh nothing
we don’t have voices

s1ice:
this channel’s convo leads me to believe otherwise

Astrobolt:
We have been fighting for our rights amidst tyranny

s1ice:
why do you think permanent residency exists in the first place, instead of everyone just immediately becoming a citizen upon asking

ItsAlreadyGold:
to disfrancise cortesians like us, obviously

Astrobolt:
Truly elitism I say

CommradePotatoe:
I dont think so, I don't see anything in the DN act that could affect the conferring of citizenship. Any determinations would lie with the cabinet

s1ice:
why do you think there’s a trial mod phase before coming a mod because the situation is very similar (i love intentionally ignoring jokes 🤭)

IceCarim:
are y'all ready for the longest judgment yet

CommradePotatoe:

oh yes
seeing the supreme court active is the greatest thing ever

IceCarim:
ok it's not longer than CommradePotatoe II, but it doesn't quote as much

CommradePotatoe:
thats too bad since all the quotes in CommradePotatoe II were made by quite a handsome fellow
:blueone:

ItsAlreadyGold:
I dont remember being involved in that judgement

CommradePotatoe:
you were gold
we made you forget

IceCarim:
this will not be a supreme court judgment

(end)